2) Babel Guesthouse

Babel Guesthouse is a 22-room hotel in one of the most relaxing areas of Siem Reap. Featuring a tranquil tropical garden and a bamboo restaurant, it really is a welcome oasis from the dust and noise of the central market and downtown area.

Its plastic-free policy is truly commendable and is encouraging guests to stay there. As well as being a supporter of the Refill Not Landfill scheme, this hotel only uses biodegradable garbage bags, boxes and cutlery, as well as bamboo straws.

Its on-site shop sells bamboo toothbrushes and travel cutlery sets to reduce the amount of plastic consumed. There is even a coconut bowl for travellers to use when purchasing street food. These items are hopefully something that other hotels will look at selling as more and more travellers seek products of this nature.

Babel has recently introduced a new scheme that allows customers and locals to bring in their empty bottles of shampoo, shower gel, body lotion etc. and simply purchase refills from their eco-friendly shop. The price is cheaper and there is no need to purchase yet another plastic bottle. A win-win for the customers and the planet too.
